

Anamorphic Typography requires the viewer to see the image from a certain perspective in order to read the message.

Research shows that it is more difficult to empathize when there are differences between people including status, culture, religion, language, skin colour, gender, and age.

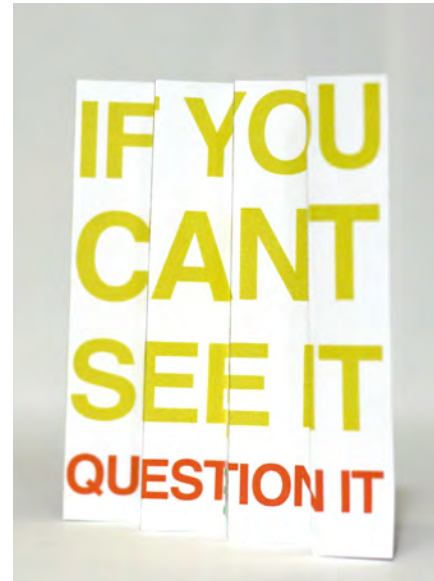

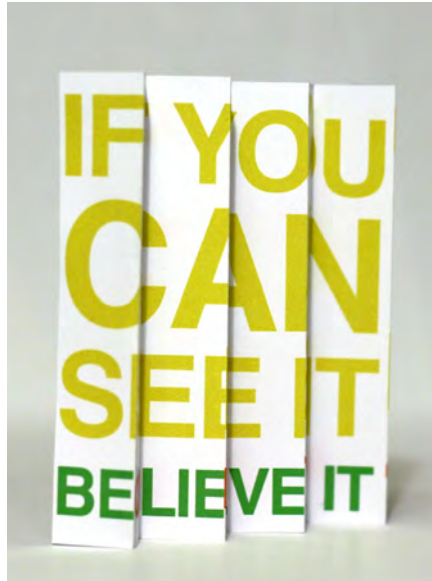

The purpose of this booklet is to view two sides of a subject and aims to provoke thought about inherited and unwavering beliefs. It also aims for one to think realistically. The book is not meant to insult or convince individuals. The concept of this book came from evaluating the differences between optimism and realism, and exploring surrealism.

Empathy is to see someone else's perspective and to be able to put yourself in their position. It also decides our natural reaction to situations that have a moral significance.

There are certain things that we cannot see but know to exist. Atoms, love, and god are some examples.

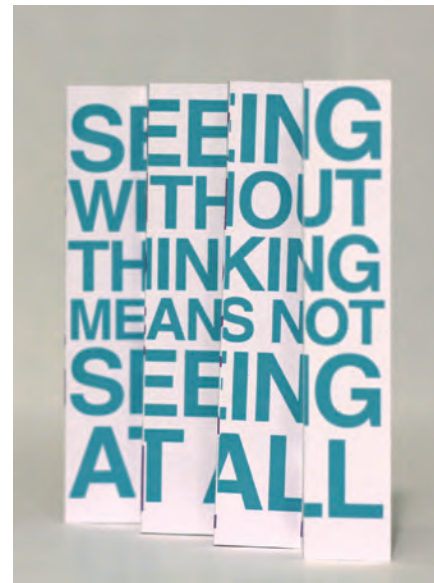

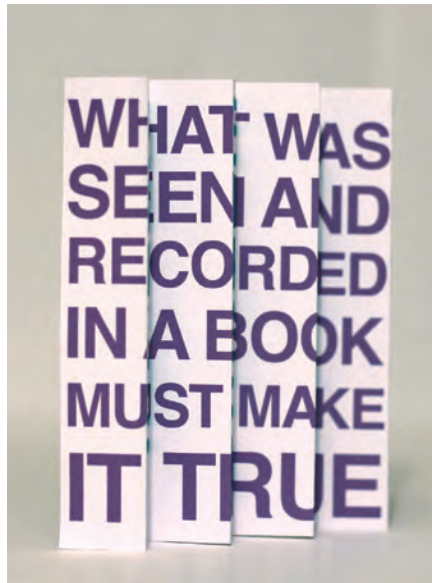

Question everything.
There are many assumptions and lies that exist, it is your responsibility to think about what makes sense and what doesn't make sense.

Anyone can write something and claim that it is fact. This is not limited to strangers writing fiction but applies even to scientific journals and articles that can be published and vouched for, despite being inaccurate or outright false.

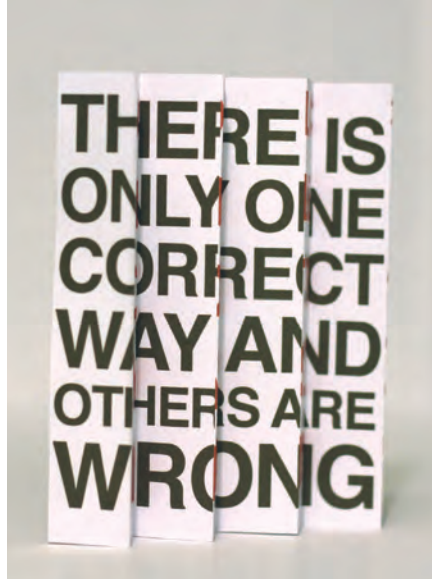

People know that magic is really just trickery, hence the name magic trick. It's cool and baffles us because it seems to defy reality, but what appears real isn't always real.

People like to think that their way is the only way. It is what they've been used to their entire life; they are against changing their mindset.

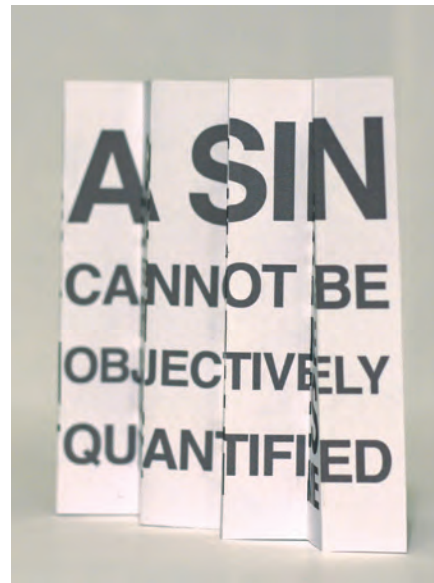

Extremists are a great example of people who are too stubborn to see the other side, regardless of subject matter. They are often so passionate that they will risk and take the lives of people who simply don't think the same way.

It's so easy to label someone as "good" and someone else as "bad". A "good" person may not realize that they have done bad things. What's good or bad has been decided by society, and the people that you are surrounded by.

Your actions may have impacted a life detrimentally. This can be from doing everyday things, somehow causing a chain effect that leads to a death. It could also be as simple as stepping on bugs. I personally don't like bugs at all, but they're living beings. I'm sure we all have unknowingly taken many innocent lives with our shoes.

Individuals that lose their path or have never had a path in life often resort to a religion for guidance. Although there is much love and beauty in the world, there are also negative things that occur every second of each day. Things that would make any normal person depressed thinking about them. You decide if all the downs are part of the plan.

Suffering eternally doesn't seem appealing to anyone, but you don't have to be afraid of a place that you've never seen to keep yourself in check. You can live a positive life and uphold morals without worrying over a paradise or underworld.

No one likes to be judged.
Some people get over it, and some people live their life with limitations because they are afraid of punishment or ridicule.

A demon is really just a fear, a negative feeling. It's the shadow within oneself. The more you believe in them, the more they will appear to exist and haunt you. In the worst case scenario, they are able to cause lunacy which can put someone in a very dangerous
state of mind.

Angels are the opposite of demons in the sense that they are supposedly watching over us and protecting us from harm. They are often mentioned when one witnesses an escape of a fatal situation.

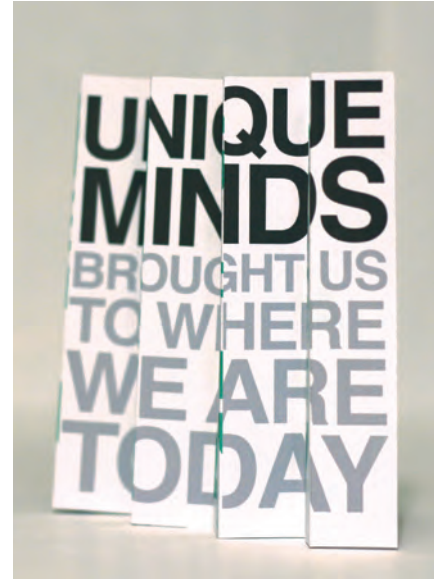

Not many think about the terrible things that happen in the world everyday, and not one person has the power to help all in need, but it should be kept in mind that not everything is sunshine and flowers. Murder, bullying, torture, rape, sickness and other misfortune is not being stopped by prayers or angels.

The nazis weren't right.
The world isn't round.
What about religion? And which religion? It's only one way to think of something.
Judge for yourself before jumping on the bandwagon.

If individuality did not exist,
the world wouldn't be how it is today. Revolutions and inventions are breakthroughs that aim to push us towards a different, and hopefully better, future. With billions of years (supposedly) of life on earth,
humans are the most capable.
At the time of writing this, there are over 7 billion people on this planet and there is nothing that can stop us besides ourselves.

If my mom says that Santa Claus is real, he's obviously real. If she says the tooth fairy is real, she too, is real. If she says that God is real, he must be real as well. The younger we are when we believe something and the longer we believe it, the harder it is to change our minds. This is why neither side of any religious group is able to convince the other.

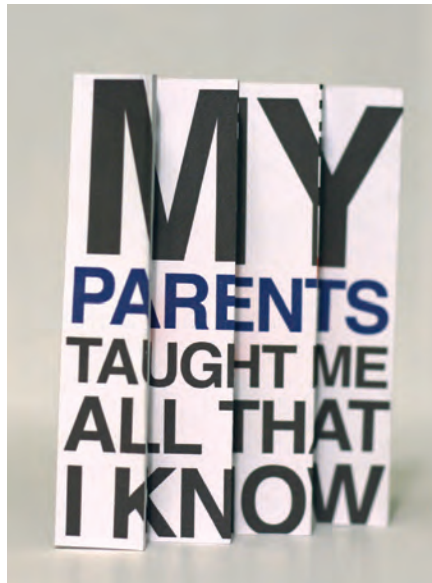

Start asking questions and take full control of your life. If you're old enough to take care of yourself, then you're old enough to fight your parents on something that you disagree on. Don't let them dictate your relationship, your career, your body, your beliefs. It's your life.

The root, or at least one of the main roots of the problems that exist in the world, according to myself, is because of the education that children receive from their parent figure.

A little bit of love for example, has the power to change the world, but those who were never taught to love or learned to love themselves will probably not live the greatest life.

We all have to thank our parents for granting us life. Respect them, but please don't live in shackles under their ultimate command and teachings. Parents are not always right.

Words are just words. I am not better or worse than anyone else. We are all human, born under different circumstances, given a set amount of choices, investing time in practices or pleasantries, or even nothing at all. You don't roll the dice right when you are born, you didn't even get to pick your own name. Certain things are set in stone, but once you are free, truly free, then you control the dice. Only you can set yourself free.
